The HAMB is one of the best sources of tech information available. If you are looking for advice on a particular problem or just a general question, some one either has done it, knows the answer, or knows where to find the answer. Search their extensive archives for solutions. You must join to search. My hat is off to the HAMB for being such a great reference source..Check their link out at the top right hand side of the front page that you just came from....Gearhead
